The two-hour event will begin at 11:30 am.

“The event is designed to provide information about the resources that are available to help the Small Business Community of Kern County”, stated David Ryal, Program Director of the Women’s Business Center. “We hear how important small business is to our local and national economy and job creation”, he said. “This event highlights how the SBA and large corporations can and do support small businesses”. Ryal added.

Along with a light lunch being provided, there will be networking opportunities and resource information for the business community being provided by the SBA, the Women’s Business Center, the University of La Verne’s College of Business and Public Management, Citibank and other organizations.
